Abstract: Shrines of Sufi Saints remain a significant aspect of the religious and social structure of Pakistan. They are fundamentally functional in creating social participation, provision of entertainment in the form of devotional music and songs (qawwals), educating people, distribution of food, sweets, money etc. The purpose behind the present study was to explore the notion of Mannat and its existing types and practices in different religions and sects of the existing society. To uncover the associated belief systems of people visiting Shrines. Moreover, to understand the underlying casual factors compelling people to make Mannat. The study’s sampling frame was Shrine of Hazrat Bari Imam in village Noor Pur Shahan of Capital Territory Islamabad, from which a sample of 80 respondents was purposively selected. The study used a blend of both qualitative and quantitative tools. The results showed that majority of the population i.e. 98.1 percent asked for mannat, and had staunch belief that they were fulfilled. Moreover the trend of mannat making was observed to be more prevalent among the socially and economically lower classes. The culture of mannat making is still functional as 98.1 percent of the population believed that it provided inner satisfaction and peace.

Key Words: Sufism, Shrine, Mannat, Belief, Sufi saint, Regular visitor, Sects, Waseela and Wasta.

INTRODUCTION
In Pothohar region there are various Shrines, where followers visit to deal with their social and psychological problems. The(Khan and Sajid 2011). Shrine of Bari Imam is built on top of Medieval sites, therefore it is at least 450 years old. The Shrines are deeply connected with the ‘Sufi Salasul’ (spiritual orders) which was established and named after some of the leading Aulia Allah (Sufi friends of God) (Khan, et al. 2014). Shah Abdul Latif Qadri Qazmi Mashhadi R.A (Bari Imam) is a well renowned Sufi Saint of the Pothohar region (Government of Pakistan 1999). He was considered to be righteous by the virtue of being pious (Platteau, 2011), true follower and preacher of Islam. He worshipped Allah (God) at a number of places(Batool, et al. 2014a) . He was a Wali Allah and spiritual guide of ‘Silsil-a-e-Qadria’, a ‘Tariga’ which claimed spiritual supremacy over all other Sufi orders (Loimeier, 2013), of Hazrat Syed Abdul Qadir Jilani (ra).

The Shrine of Hazrat Bari Imam was originally built on the order of Mughal Emperor Aurangzeb (Government of Pakistan 1999). It is under control and management of ‘Auqaf’, institution of Federal Ministry of Religious Affairs, since 1976. A total of 40 employees work at this Shrine, 17 are regular and rest are hired on daily wages by civil defense (Batool, et al. 2014a). The Shrine of Hazrat Bari Imam contains a unique culture like other sacred areas. Believers of Shah Abdul Latif perform a variety of religious rituals at Shrine to make connection with spiritual world especially the buried Saint. Famous practices of this Shrine are

- Lightning rituals (burning of candles, charagheh, much and agarbatti)
- Chadar and flower spreading on and ‘jharoo lagana’on the Sufi graves
- ‘Mannat uthana’, ‘Langar bantra’ (free distribution of food to the public), Tabarruk (distribution of food to specific people), distribution of sweets (Elaichi dana/Makhane)
- Story telling regarding Hazrat Ali ul Murtaza (A.S), Naat, Tilawat, Dhimmel
- Slogans of Hazrat Ali ul Murtaza (A.S) and of Hazrat Bari Imam etc (Batool, et al. 2014b)
- Threads and lock tying to the mesh around the grave area of the shrine and taking circling the shrine, and visiting the shrine barefooted.

At Shrine of Hazrat Bari Imam both the believers and non-believers visit and make Mannat (to ask or beg), because it is believed that Hazrat Bari Imam is relatively closer to Allah and can advocate their desires to Him. When the desires, or prayers are fulfilled believers present different things at Shrines depending upon their socio-economic condition, including animals, money, gold, sweets, daigs (food), milk, ghee, pitchers (gharolies), dalies, sehras etc for showing their love with buried Sufi and Allah (Batool, et al. 2014b).

MATERIALS AND METHODS

The present research was conducted at the Shrine of Hazrat Bari Imam in village Noor Pur Shahan, by selecting a sample of 80 devotees (regular visitors). To explore the types, ritual practices, and casual factors compelling people to make ‘mannat’ and its associated belief system various qualitative and quantitative tools including participant observation, structured questionnaire, formal and informal interviews and case studies were used. The data was entered in SPSS for further analyzation.

The respondents and their families when inquired if they ‘ask for Mannat at shrines’, 98.1 percent agreed that they did. Further they added that the tradition of considering these places as holy and visiting shrines has been passed on to them by their families and the practices have been amalgamating by their parents and grandparents. However 1.9 percent stated that they only visited the shrine in respect of the saint and for goodwill. Further the beliefs were investigated by asking if they had a ‘Staunch belief that Mannat asked at shrines are fulfilled’ 100 percent agreed that they frequently asked for Mannats at Shrine of Hazrat Bari Imam and that they were always fulfilled. The completion of Mannat strengthened their beliefs rigorously and made them regular visitors. Diverse believes and ways of request/pray were observed at Shrine.

- Some Believers asked directly from the Sufi Saint
- Some made him a waseela in front of God
- Some gave wasa of Sufi to God
- While some asked directly from God (Batool, et al. 2014a)

It was observed that all these practices, ways and ‘waseelay’ are actually the same. A visit to the Shrine for Mannat shows the belief of pilgrims as he requests the fulfilment of his desires. Paying pilgrimage to the saint means that the Sufi Saint is being made into a ‘waseela’ and ‘wasta’ in front of God. Now no matter what path believers choose, i.e. should they ask directly from God or from Sufi Saint or make Sufi Saint as waseela and wasta they prayers come true because of the Saint. When inquired ‘Does the lower class only believe and asks for Mannat at shrines’, it was found to be true that majorly only the lower class believe on shrine and visit it as 94.5 percent agreed and are usually from rural areas. While, 5.5 percent disagreed. The students in an Indian university have found during their study that urban people are more superstitious than those having rural background (George and Sreedhar, 2006).

When inquired why and which things compelled them to make Mannat, they referred to their Holy Scripture Quran. They reflect that Allah answers that a man calls his God or cries for help, and marches toward Him, when he was in trouble and complexity, and then He bestows His blessing to him. Needs and difficulties force people to ask and beg to God. They have been distressed from materialistic means so that they go towards God and find realistic means (waseela of Auliya Allah, friends of God) to please Allah.

At Shrines of Sufi Saints, believers not only come for social, economic, physical and psychological needs but also for spiritual healing, Faiz and Nigah. After completion of any desire, ‘they satisfy their soul by presenting Nazrana’, as 100 percent respondents agreed that nazarana is a common practice after the completion of the ‘Mannat’ while 98.1 percent unravelled that it provided them with inner satisfaction. The meaning of Mannat (vow) explored from the respondents has been found to be multidimensional. Mannat has been believed to be as an oath or a promise while some held it as a transaction between a person and a deity, to render some services or gift. It was observed that, Mannat is considered as a humble request (Minnat) or pray of a person at Shrine to get some material or non-material objects which he can’t easily receive from God through his own name as they are sinners. The prayers thus when not answered directly, people march towards these sacred places and pious people (Saints/Auliya). The religious ritual Mannat is practiced in a variety of world’s religions, cultures and sects. In Christianity, a person free of marry by making religious Mannat (vow). It intended to help people and do well in life. The ‘Barata’ (Bengali term for vow) stories provide models for ethics compassion, and caring for others, making virtuous daughters and wives(Raj and Harman 2006) . In Buddhism, many different kinds of religious vows are taken by lay and monastic community in Mahayana and Vajrayana tradition. Muslim vows are characteristic of supernatural power and history is well-known to supplicants. Islam includes a number of sects including Ahl-e Sunnat, Ahl-e-Tashayyo, Ahl-e-Wahab, Dayobundi, Naqshbundi etc. Thus the religious practices vary according to this division. The concept of Mannat exists in almost all sects but practices vary accordingly. Similarly in Pakistan, majority of population is Muslim(Farooq and Kayani 2012) but the community belongs to different sects, and the most popular are Ahl-e Sunna and Ahl-e-Tashayyo. Followers of both these sects have belief on Risalat, Nabuwat and Wilayat. They take pilgrimage of sacred Shrines for various purposes and practice different Shrine rituals.

Families visit shrines due to their dedication and traditional orientation towards Sufism. Tradition of Sufism reflects that spiritual resources provide coping strategy for various issues of the contemporary world(Voll 1992) . At Shrine of Hazrat Bari Imam, vast population of pilgrims belonged to Ahl-e Sunna and Ahl-e-Tashayyo. Majority of the people came to make Minnat or to present Nazrana after fulfilment or were regular visitors. Pilgrims regularly perform certain activities and sometimes make Minnat(Khan and Sajid 2011) . People come with their needs and request for the fulfilment and decide Nazrana on their own. There is no compulsion for Nazrana like to present a ‘Daag’ or gold etc or time period. The decision is made according to the affordability. Believers state that Auliya Allah (Saint) does not need all these things. They are friends of God and just bestow things to people without discrimination. It’s only the belief of people and a way of satisfaction, which is one of the major characteristic of Shrine (Khan and Sajid 2011).

Case Study

Bakht Bibi was a regular visitor of Shrine Hazrat Bari Imam. She lived in an area adjacent to the Shrine. She claimed that she met with Hazrat Baba Lal Shah Qalandar of Sursi Syeddan when she was living in Murree. She left her native area Murree for providing better educational opportunities to her son. She came to Islamabad city and chose this area for living. Bakht bibi told that from that time she used to visit Shrine of Hazrat Bari Imam regularly. When the son of Bakht Bibi completed his education, he got a good job of government sector in Islamabad.

In the beginning, they didn’t have their own home but after job her son bought his own. Bakht bibi went to Shrine everyday and shared all her worries and joys to the buried Saint and asked vows for different things. Her son’s job was excellent and her family was living happily. One day her son lost his job due to a conspiracy. He struggled a lot but did not succeed in proving himself as innocent. The conditions worsened day by day. However, everyday Bakht Bibi went to the Shrine and asked the holy saint for her son’s job. She made a Mannat that if Hazrat Bari Imam will return the job of her son; she will give a ‘Daag’ as a Nazrana at Shrine. Then one day his son decided to go back to his native area because since he could not cope with the stress anymore. Bakht bibi however, disagreed and felt worried. She didn’t want to leave Hazrat Bari Imam. Every day she went to the Shrine and cried her heart out. Before the day of departure Bakht bibi came to the shrine for last pilgrimage and ‘Salam’. She was pained and returned back saying “today is my last visit to you. I do not know if I will come back or not”. Now when she returned back home home, her son hugged her happily and told her that his boss called him in office and gave him the news that the conspirer had been arrested; and they need not leave now. Bakht bibi was overwhelmed and returned to the Shrine. She paid her gratitude to the buried Saint. After some days she gave Nazrana (Daag) at Shrine.

Bakht bibi added that she had great belief on Shrines and Auliya Allah. Her belief was strengthened after this incidence. Hazrat Bari Imam loves their pilgrims and bestows Faiz and what they ask.’ A unique culture is observed in various holy places of the world including Mosques, Hindu Temples (Mandir), Churches and in Shrines. Muslim saints and Shrines, known as dargahs attract diverse range of pilgrims religiously(Batool, et al. 2014b) . Beliefs and attitudes are socially learned (Bord and Faulkner 1975). People adapt their actions and behaviours according to their observations and awareness (Kottak 2002). Some religious beliefs have more resilience and are retained or culturally transmitted by humans (Scupin and DeCorse 2009). Pakistani community allocate great importance to the Shrine of dead saints (Daniel and Pugh 1984) and have great faith upon them.

CONCLUSION
Sufi Shrines hold immense importance in society of Pakistan. Believers of the shrines perform different rituals there (Abbas, et al. 2013). The role of Sufis has been considered as intermediary bridge that lead to God and success. Pakistani people view Sufi saints as the embodiment of Islamic virtue and consider them true Faqirs (impoverished ones) characterized by a life of piety, self-sacrifice and public service (Rozehnal 2006). The tradition of visiting sacred places to attain religious merit, washing off the sins and completion of desires and prayers (Mannat) are common practice across the world (Frembgen 2012). The Shrine of Bari Imam is one of the most popular Shrine of South Asia. Followers and believers of Hazrat Bari Imam are belonged to various areas of Pakistan as well as to other countries of world. Diverse ranges of rituals are practiced here every day. A distinctive ritual Mannat is also practiced here like other sacred places and Shrines. People make different types of Mannats and after completion of desire/pray, they present Nazrana for self-satisfaction. The Shrine of Hazrat Bari Imam is under construction since many years. During this time period, number of disputes arose. Shrine is under control of Auqaf (governmental institution) but the role of Auqaf is zero percent at shrine. The message of Islam and Faqar is not conveying by this institution. Believers of pilgrims are mortifying so that it is required; Auqaf will follow the path of buried Saint Hazrat Bari Imam and spread the message of Islam and Faqar through this religious institution.
